Моя 100-я статья

Hello my dear followers and all those who just visited my blog about learning English. It's going to be my 100th post. Oh God, time flies. It's scaring me sometimes.

It seems just recently the idea of making a blog crossed my mind and I wrote the first article — «Beginning of learning English. My experience». It was on the sixth of September, more than half a year ago. And now I'm writing my hundredth post! I'm shocked by myself to be honest. In fact, I'm not that sort of people who finish what they begin to do. I'd say that I'm always full of enthusiasm when I'm starting to do something, but very soon I'm usually getting bored of it.

But it turned out that keeping blog is a very interesting thing. I still learn English and my blog helps me to improve it, because I'm writing in two languages. And when I'm looking through my old posts I can really see the improvement! Especially it's related to my writing skill. In the beginning I had to check thoroughly my writing and correct mistakes, but now I'm mostly writing much more correctly. My English is really getting better and better.

Also, for this time I got acquainted with many good people. By this moment I have 411 subscribers and I appreciate it very much! Thank you for following my blog guys! It's really encouraging me to write more and more. Thank you for all the comments you're leaving and the questions you're asking me by e-mail. I told you that I was not a teacher of English. I'm a learner like you. And I'm glad that my posts help you! And it's just a pleasure for me to talk to you and learn English with you!

So although I've never had any hobbies, my blog became a part of my life. It's my hobby, it's my friend and it's my passion! But it's not so bad I think. My friends, if you have any questions about English, just ask and I'll write a new article about it. If I don't know the answer I'll check it out and make the article anyways! Be free to contact me.

A few days ago I put a new poll where I asked «Why do you learn English?». And as you can see the most of voters answered «To improve yourself». And it's great. I was expecting this variant. In my opinion, everyone must improve as a person. All of us can do it in different ways: learn something new, do some sports, work hard, make a family etc. All ways are good. The most important thing is not to stop and not to kill yourself by drinking, drugs, doing nothing and just complaining on your life. Especially if you're young. I'm really sorry of people like that. If you learn and work, you're improving. And if you can't even do something, it's not a problem. If you're trying to work it out, you're living then! If you're not, you're just existing in this World and waste your time! It's my personal opinion.

And there is one more thing, that I want to share with you tonight. Do you believe in kindness? I do.

Moscow is driving me crazy sometimes. Working five days a week, I have to meet many people and see different situations happening at this metropolis. And the point is, there are much more good people in this World than bad ones. Just a little things I notice every day makes me think like that. When I see like young people help old ones in transport or men help girls, I understand that nothing lost yet! And I'm so glad to see things like that much more often than some bad behavior and actions of stuped people. Kindness and love will safe this World, that's true!

Ok my friends, I'm stopping going crazy and getting to bed! Keep learning English and take care!
