

How not to get tired of learning English?

Hello, my friends! Foreign languages are very important nowadays. The most popular of them is English. As a rule, people start learning English in youth. You might remember those long English classes at school and University. That's time when learners begin to understand how it's like to study English and find out the methodic – not easy routine with a lot of grammar rules, exercises, speaking classes, textbooks, etc.

Very often, even bad students understand, that learning English is practically a non-stop process and, if you want to succeed, you should study hard on a constant basis. Otherwise, you will forget everything, that you have learned. Needless to say, that if you want not only to learn English, but also use it correctly, you have to study day by day, learn new rules, drill them and practice your speaking skill.

All this might make people give up and get bored of English very soon. That's why you should take breaks and try to make your studies more interesting! For instance, you can start reading books in English, that were retold by native speakers in the easy way, special for English learners like you! There are a lot of books like this! It's much more interesting than learning by textbooks!

The second way to make learning more interesting is to start watching animations and movies in English! It will help you to enjoy learning, and at the same time you will mix pleasure with business! Watching movies in the original language, you get used to real English from native speakers. It's very powerful and more effective than listening to ideal audio materials from textbooks.

Occasionally between classes try to spend time with friends and improve your English together! Use Internet and social networks to find native speakers pen friends and talk to them from time to time in English! Also, you can help each other, if you find foreigners, that learn Russian! They will help you to overcome the language bar and will tell you something interesting about their countries!

Keep learning English and take care!
