А нужен ли английский

Hi everyone! Today I'd like to speak of the importance of English. Do you think it's necessary nowadays to know this language? I'll answer the question from my point of view.

When I studied at school I didn't worry too much about my English. And I don't regret about it, but anyway if I could go back in that time I'd change my thoughts and study much better. And I really want to recommend all pupils who are reading this post to think about it and learn English hard from the very beginning.

And the reason why I'm saying it is that nowadays people can't ignore foreign languages. And it's related to English to the most extent. Whatever you do you'll face English in your life. Whatever profession you choose you'll be required knowing English. At all the interviews I had in my life, employers asked me if I knew English or not. And to some extent it helped me to find a job in a foreign company.

So if you think you don't need English because you're not planning to work with it, you're wrong. Don't underestimate English. From the beginning try to pay much attention to this language and learn it hard. And it will serve you in the future, believe me.

We use computers a lot at work. And it's clear that the English language and computers are tied. Not only computers, I mean all the digital technologies. You can say «I don't need English, I use all these things in Russian». Yes, it's true. But whether you want it or not you may have some problems using them if you don't know English. There are many applications or their descriptions which are in English only. And just remember how many times looking at your display you saw a message of some error which was in English. So it's challenging sometimes. And we can't deny that it's important to know English when we use computers or other electronic devises.

One more reason to learn English is the communication with foreigners. Many people like going abroad and travelling. And when we come to any foreign country we have to talk to people. And the best thing in English is that it's the World language. And wherever you go you'll be able to communicate with people. Of course in some countries English is more popular then in others, but almost all the countries study English as the second language nowadays. When I was in Thailand people spoke English there, when I was in Egypt people spoke English there as well. So this language will help you in any country, it's true. Especially if you have some problem and want somebody to help you.

A few months ago I went to London. And I can say that if you're planning to go to English speaking country you might have problems if you don't know English at all. You will see it already in the airport after your plane land.

So if you want to feel confidently and not to worry about communication with people in other countries, you should learn English.

And the last reason to learn English is the self-improvement. We live in the 21st century my friends. If you want to keep the society's development, you should always go ahead and improve yourself. And learning of a foreign language is one of the most important things on this way. Let it be your bright feature. Learn English and improve yourself!
